

Buoyant city is good news

A crew from Sky News Business Channel travelled to Orange yesterday as part of a story the channel is doing on the region's buoyant property and employment market.

Executive producer Margaret Lomas and camera operator Richard Facey visited several locations throughout the city, including historic Duntryleague Golf Club.

The crew also interviewed Orange mayor John Davis.

"They were here to look at the reasons why Orange is such a good place for property investment," Orange City Council industry and skills project manager Tony Boland said.

"They also looked at why employment opportunities are so strong here, including employment opportunities offered by the new hospital," said.

- Tracey Prisk

BUSY VISIT: Executive producer Margaret Lomas, camera operator Richard Facey and Orange City Council industry and skills project manager Tony Boland.